THE MAIN TOPICS OF THE THESIS

THE MAIN TOPICS OF THE THESIS

THE MAIN TOPICS OF THE THESIS

The present Thesis:

- ⇒ defines and characterizes interactions among social planners and stakeholders;
- ⇒ from different perspectives;
- ⇒ at different levels of abstraction, granularity and complexity;
- ⇒ by using different (abstract) simulation models;
- ⇒ by using different (high level) mechanisms;
- ⇒ within a unifying perspective (the micro-macro conflict).

THE MOTIVATIONS

THE MOTIVATIONS

THE MOTIVATIONS

The main motivations of the thesis are:

- (1) to try to understand the interactions between individual and collective behaviors;
- (2) to try to attune formal norms (social planners) with the social norms (stakeholders);
- (3) to try to minimize the need of coercive and punitive tools.

THE LEVELS

THE LEVELS

We moved at the following levels:

- ⇒ microlevel where we have interacting individuals as singletons;
- ⇒ mesolevel where we consider the presence of groups and coalitions;
- ⇒ macrolevel where we consider a society as a whole.

- ⇒ Analysis/description tool.
- ⇒ Planning activities of the social planners:
 - end product formal norms within a normative context;
 - it requires a descriptive preliminary step;
 - “global” normative/prescriptive/proscriptive aims;
 - hints for success: flexibility, distributed control, economical/ethical incentives.

- ⇒ filter, mediation (Top-down);
- ⇒ organization, contrast (Bottom-up).
- ⇒ It contains either groups (covering) or coalitions (partitioning).

- ⇒ Interactions with the stakeholders “mediated” by/through the presence of types and hierarchies.

STRUCTURING SOCIAL PLANNERS

In real cases the social planners are not peers in decision processes. We have:

- types of social planners;
- hierarchies of social planners.
- ⇒ Interactions among types, hierarchies and both.
- ⇒ Interactions with the stakeholders “mediated” by/through the presence of types and hierarchies.

THE MICRO-MACRO CONFLICT (1)

THE MICRO-MACRO CONFLICT (1)

THE MICRO-MACRO CONFLICT (1)

The micro-macro conflict ingredients:

- ⇒ formal norms as the outcome of a [global] planning process (social planners);
- ⇒ social norms as the outcome of local interactions (stakeholders);
- ⇒ normative/prescriptive/proscriptive context (social planners);
- ⇒ emergent, self organized behaviors (stakeholders).

THE MICRO-MACRO CONFLICT (2)

The micro-macro conflict features:

- ⇒ globally normative/prescriptive/proscriptive intentions (social planners);
- ⇒ locally self-normative/self-prescriptive intentions (stakeholders);
- ⇒ clash of wills;
- ⇒ clash of perspectives, values, interests;
- ⇒ local versus global, individual versus collective.

THE MICRO-MACRO CONFLICT (3)

The micro-macro solutions (??)

- ⇒ We do not provide solutions, no general solution exists.
- ⇒ We tried to give some hints, soft suggestions.
- ⇒ Hints: correctly identify the policy variables and exert the right educational pressures.
- ⇒ Hints: ethics as a structuring tool of the interactions at all levels.
- ⇒ Hints: minimize coercive and punitive tools, use properly the right (material/immaterial) incentives.

CONCLUSIONS: THE BRIGHT SIDE

What this thesis is:

- ⇒ it represents an attempt to structure the micro-macro conflict (a central topic of sociological research);
- ⇒ it provides an hopefully new perspective in which to frame the micro-macro conflict;
- ⇒ it suggests the crucial reasons of the conflict;
- ⇒ it gives some hints on how to face and possibly solve them.

CONCLUSIONS: THE DARK SIDE

CONCLUSIONS: THE DARK SIDE

[Some] negative features of the thesis:

- ⇒ no general solution to the micro-macro conflict (but nobody has ever proved either the existence or the unicity of a solution);
- ⇒ no general approach;
- ⇒ many open paths and dead ends;
- ⇒ many dangling references and false starts.
